Defy and defeat every impediment. Live every dream to the fullest.

Ashraf Ali M.A
Publisher

2016 was a momentous year for the whole world. A year full of events – some daunting and some providing solace in these tough circumstances. It may seem like a time to step inward to avoid the weirdness of the modern world but the truth is, 2017 needs to be about taking a step forward, and cruising ahead.

While we waited for divine intervention, wading in our own pool of misery, Indian athletes brought laurels to the nation at the Summer Paralympics. As the world contended with the Zika outbreak, an Indian Company became the first to file a patent for a vaccine against the virus. The list goes on.

As one of my favourites, Paulo Coelho once said, 'You drown by not falling into the ocean, but by staying submerged in it.' So, in 2017 let's choose to defy and defeat all impediments and live every dream to the fullest.

We at Lulu Mall also promise to brighten up your lives this year as we have lots of surprises laid ahead. For starters, shoppers have reason to rejoice with the entry of not one or two – but 8 top premium fashion brands in the mall! This edition of Lulu Happiness packs a solid punch as film stars Rana Daggubati and Shriya Saran discuss movies, life and relationships with us and we can't wait to share it with you as well. We also have mouth-watering reviews on the delicacies at Maharaja Bhog and KFC. This quarter, you will also get to meet some very popular celebrities in the mall.

Next month Lulu Mall turns 4 and we are forever grateful to you for the continued love and warmth showered on us. We promise a most exuberant celebration on March 10th and invite you to join in our festivities.

Meanwhile, go conquer 2017 and don't forget to write to us at marketing@in.lulumea.com. We'd love to hear from you!

Back to ASICS!

Second Floor

Way back in 1949, the very inspiring Kihachiro Onitsuka began his athletic footwear company (Onitsuka Co., Ltd.) by manufacturing basketball shoes out of his living room in Kobe, Japan. He chose the name ASICS for his company in 1977. Did you know that ASICS is an acronym derived from a famous Latin phrase? ASICS actually expands to read Anima Sana In Corpore Sano - a sound mind in a sound body. Profound, right? Staying true to this founding philosophy, every ASICS innovation, every concept, every idea is intended to create the best product, with the sole mission of becoming the number one brand for the sports enthusiast. To accomplish this, ASICS pledges to continue to make the best products; striving to build upon technological advances and pushing the limits on what one can learn from the body and its needs in athletic gear. ASICS India Pvt. Ltd. was established in April 2012 and primarily offered marketing support and promotional activities for local sales agents. From January 2015, the company announced launch of sales operations as a part of expanding operations in emerging markets. ASICS has been an official sponsor of India's biggest running event, the Mumbai Marathon, since 2008, and has increased its appeal as a true sport performance brand among runners in particular. The brand plans to further strengthen its running lineup and actively develop goods for locally-popular sports like cricket as well as indoor sports like badminton, tennis and so on.

We welcome ASICS to Lulu Mall!

How Shriya found her groove

South India's favourite sensation, Shriya Saran has seen it all. The highs and lows, the ups and downs but she has stayed even keeled with an amazing inner strength that guides her on her path. In an extended soulful conversation with Vanaja Banagiri, with inputs from Sashidhar Adivi, the diva holds forth on everything that matters to her.

For a girl who had oily hair and wore spectacles when she was growing up in a small town to being voted the 'Ultimate Hottie of the South' in an online poll, Shriya Saran has traversed an eventful path. She's an avid reader of Haruki Murakami, practises Vipassana meditation and runs a spa that employs visually challenged people. It's difficult to define Shriya, it's even more difficult to categorise her. She can be this, that and all things at different times. Some know her as the hard-to-please diva while others will swear that she is the sweetest thing on two feet. So, will the real Shriya Saran please stand up? She responds with her trademark school girl giggle and says, "I guess I'm all of them. Don't we all behave differently with different people in different circumstances?" Trust her to say it like it is. But people close to her know for a fact that she is quite a simpleton at heart, straight forward, at times self doubting, mostly super confident, loves dressing up, wonders if she'll make a good mother, loves her mom, takes life's challenges in her stride, is a die-hard romantic, optimistic to a fault, that's who she is. And oh so pretty! One of the few actresses who look better off screen sans make up than on it! "I wasn't the prettiest girl in school. I was known more for my dance than my looks when I was growing up," she remarks.

It's been around 15 years since her Telugu debut in Ishtam but, "It's now that I am truly enjoying my work. I feel a strong connection to it," she says reminiscing, "Initially, it was all fun and games. Work meant meeting new people, seeing new places, a whole lot of fun. Today, it is a lot more. It is about exploring more characters; it's about evolving mentally and spiritually." Everything she does, she does intensely whether it's her meditation, running the spa or facing the camera. "For me, it's all about love and heart. If I don't feel deeply for something, I just switch off. Even where my films are concerned. Whenever I didn't feel connected to a particular role or film, I didn't even bother watching it. They gave me the CDs but no, sorry, I am so stubborn that I refused to watch." So what goes wrong in such films? Why does she not feel good about those roles? "Between the writing table and the editing table, a lot happens. Sometimes, things don't turn out the way you wish them to. But there's no point in the blame game. Sometimes you go wrong, sometimes somebody else goes wrong. Honestly, you can sense on the 2nd or 3rd day of the shooting that something is not right. That's when the disconnect happens. But you know it's a part of our profession. You live and you learn," she says philosophically.

What does acting mean to her? "It's my life. Acting has been like going to school for me. Sometimes I have learnt a lot, at times I haven't. Every film has taught me something though. I am so, so indebted to South films. They have given me my identity, my profession, success, name and fame."

Any people instrumental in making things happen for her? "Yes. Yes. Vikram and Raj, my first directors, Rajinikanth & Shankar for Shivaji, Nishikant Kamat and Ajay Devgn for Drishyam, in fact all my co stars, producers, long list. But most importantly Nagarjuna. He picked me up from nowhere for his film. His house is an open house for me. I know both his sons well. Amala is also my friend. She is the one who introduced me to Vipassana."

The actress who is now back to enthrall her fans in Tollywood, is thrilled with the response she's getting for 'Gautamiputra Sathakarini'. Playing a character from history set in 1st Century A.D. is a first for her. Although she graduated in History, what drove her to be part of the project? "Honestly, I knew little about Gautamiputra, but I guess it's time we celebrate our history and retell it for Gen Next. The past gives us a structure of how we were, are and shall be in the future. When director Krish narrated the script to me I was very impressed with his level of detailing. More than anything, we are reinforcing the greatness of Telugu pride and culture, so I flagged it off pronto," she recalls.

The film narrates the story of Gautamiputra Satakarni (played by Balakrishna), one of the greatest emperors of the Satavahana dynasty, and how he unified various kingdoms to rule the country. Shriya, who plays Vasishthi Devi, Satakarni's wife, has once again come off as an actress of mettle. "Every film that touches you changes you. There are two ways in which you can connect with a character: Inside out and outside in. Playing Vasishthi Devi, I travelled inside out. When you are doing a character like this, it's a lifetime experience. A lot of research went into the making – costumes, artwork, set designs, etc.," she says.

Much like her co-star Balakrishna and director Krish, the actress feels that fortuitous events like rain were on their side during the filming of the majestic historical. "Although there was a lot weighing upon the project, things worked with great precision on the sets. During a schedule, there were rains for three days. When I was wondering what next, Krish asked me to be on the location. It was nicer when it was raining," she quips.

But did she feel intimidated while acting with a seasoned actress like Hema Malini? "I don't think of actors as senior and junior, like they have in IT jobs. She is very radiant and knowledgeable. There were times when Balayya garu and she would have jugalbandi on slokas, history, etc. It's nice to know someone who is so accomplished and yet so grounded," she says. Considering she has starred with the best of the lot in the south, why didn't she make a mark in Bollywood? "I've no idea, honestly. In the world of cinema, you can never put a finger on what works, what doesn't. No one knows why a film doesn't do well. There are forces bigger than us and beyond us. Sometimes there is no explanation. I would be God if I knew that. At the end of the day, we all want to reach a bigger audience. That's what every actor wants. Why does anybody tell a story? Because they want it to be heard by more and more people."

Are there enough scripts for 30+ actresses? "I think so. Things are changing. Mindsets are changing. A lot of new age films have succeeded. Quite a few 30+ actresses like Kajol, Kareena and Jyothika are doing very well. So things are looking good."

Shriya is also known for her social conscience. She has supported many charities and has been closely involved with a few like CAP Foundation and Naandi. A few years ago she took it a step further and set up a spa all on her own called Shree Spa that employs visually challenged therapists. How did it all start? “When I was in school, I happened to miss my bus one day. I must have been around 14-15 then. There was a Blind School on the opposite road. My mom had told me several times that I should visit it. It was really hot that day and I decided to cross the road and go to the blind school out of curiosity. I sat under a tree watching these kids playing cricket. One of the kids came and sat next to me and started touching my face. That’s how a visually-impaired person comes to know whether it is a new person or old. He asked me what made me come there. I told him, ‘I want a glass of water as I have missed my bus.’ He started laughing. I asked him why he was laughing and he said, ‘I am blind, still I never miss my catch. How did you miss your bus?’ His innocence got me intrigued and I started going there for their Diwali melas.

When I moved to Mumbai, I wanted to start something for visually-impaired people with whatever little money I had. Once my mother and I were on an outdoor shoot in Bangkok for a month, where my mother learnt the basic course for becoming a spa therapist. We came to know that there was a course in Mumbai where they taught visually-impaired people to become spa therapists. We decided to open up a spa with the two-room place we had. We have five therapists who do all kinds of massages. Each one of them is very intelligent. The visually-challenged are blessed with a keen sense of touch and healing. The sad part is that we, in India, and in many cases internationally, don’t view disability normally. We aren’t encouraged to study with children with special abilities in school; we can’t accept them like other members of the workforce. It is a question of trust, you know. Our clients say that it is on par with any other spa. You should visit sometime. Seeing is believing.”

Who does she rely on most professionally and personally? “My mom for sure. I fight with her but I love her the most. She gave up everything for me. She supported me in every aspect of my life; she has stood by me regardless of the situation. I share everything with her. She knows me like nobody else does. I am what I am because of her.”

Is there a special someone in her life? When does she plan to get hitched? “I would love to get married eventually. But it will happen when it will happen. I would like him to be someone who is a friend, someone who I can grow with mentally, spiritually and emotionally.” Are the eligible bachelors listening?

All Hail the Macho Star

While men envy him, women adore him. But Rana Daggubati, the class act that he is, takes both of these in his stride. That the man, whose popularity graph is soaring north, has a razor sharp mind in addition to a superb physique is a well-established fact. However, what many don't know is that this down-to-earth actor is also pragmatic and professional to the core. At least, two of Rana's films are bound to go down the annals of history this year. Yes, the actor's film, The Ghazi Attack, which will be India's first film on war at sea, is scheduled to hit screens on February 17 while his sequel to India's biggest blockbuster Baahubali, which has already made history, is all set to release in April. That apart, Rana, who was born in Chennai, is also playing the lead in a period Tamil film that is set in the pre-Independence era. The actor, in an exclusive interview to Lulu Happiness, opens up to Manigandan KR on all of these and his love for Kerala where he is scheduled to shoot for his Tamil film. Excerpts follow...

Baahubali 1 has been a tremendous success and expectations for the sequel have skyrocketed. Having worked on both parts, which would you say was more demanding, Baahubali 1 or Baahubali 2?

We shot both of them together. Most of Part Two was shot when we were filming Part One and what got better was we were also learning, figuring out how to do the war sequences correctly. By the time we got to filming Part Two, we had gained certain experiences. Part One did extremely well as a franchise and we could afford better budget and better technicians. So, things got definitely simpler and more organised while we were filming Part Two.

You sport an even more impressive physique in the sequel than your already spectacular appearance in Part One. Tell us about the efforts that you have had to put in for Baahubali 2.

The war happens in the sequel and Rajamouli wanted me to play an old person. I had to look old but also be strong. In the war sequence, there are a lot of action sequences and we needed to look the part to pull off an entire war together. So, that's what Rajamouli gave us and that is what we worked for and things worked out quite well.

How many hours did you have to spend in the gym to ensure you got that beefed up look?

I used to do two sessions a day, about an hour-and-a-half each and it went on for a couple of months that way. I don't train on Sundays because the body needs rest to kind of recover and get back.

What was the biggest challenge with regard to working on Baahubali 2?

Be it the body, be it the look we are trying to get, it is not really challenging because right from Day 1 we understood what we were supposed to do. Our brief was exact and we had to just get there. The challenging part was doing two films at the same time. As I was shooting for Baahubali 2 and The Ghazi Attack at almost the same time, my size was the bigger issue. I had to look extremely thick and beefy for

As I was shooting for Baahubali 2 and The Ghazi Attack at almost the same time, my size was the bigger issue. I had to look extremely thick and beefy for Baahubali and I had to look sleek in The Ghazi Attack

Baahubali and I had to look sleek in The Ghazi Attack for I play a naval officer in it. So, shifting between weights was the challenging part because of the constraints of time. I had just four to five weeks each way. I wish I had had a little more time but it wasn't there as the schedules were that way. To drop muscle size is not easy. So, what I did was I deprived myself of proteins for four to five weeks. I finished The Ghazi Attack entirely and then went back to Baahubali 2 for which I again had to put on weight. But yes, it got done very satisfactorily and we are very happy with the result.

Anything that Rajamouli works on ends up being a success. What kind of person is he?

Rajamouli is a filmmaker who is very sincere to his craft. His command on his craft is really solid and I think he constantly learns and keeps getting better and better at what he does. I think that is what sets him apart. Also, he is a very motivating person.

Your other film, The Ghazi Attack, is also hogging the limelight. Tell us about it.

It is India's first war-at-sea film. It is based on the 1971 incident of PNS Ghazi coming to attack INS Vikrant. Ghazi came to the Eastern Naval Command, which was at Vishakhapatnam at that point. It was taken down and it happened two days before the war on the midnight of December third and fourth, 1971. December 4th was declared as Indian Navy Day and four days later the Indo-Pak war of 1971 broke out. So, this was one of those incidents that were classified and kept under wraps for a long time. It was an important story to tell as it was a victory for our Navy. There have been many films on the Army and the police but there has not been a film on our Navy, which is the fifth largest in the world. They defend a huge coastline. Our Navy is really big but very few people know about it. So, it was an important story to tell and it came out well as an action thriller. It is a national film, which will be out in Telugu, Hindi and Tamil.

There are several versions of what happened on the night that Ghazi was taken down. Which version has the team stuck to and why did you pick that version?

One it is based on a book called The Blue Fish, which has been written by the director Sankalp Reddy himself. That forms the first portion and the trail of the film moves from there. After that, what happened is classified and none of us are ever going to know what really happened on it. We have spoken to many persons and there are many versions. Everybody has a version. Even Pakistan has its own version of it. Ultimately, what we have done is we have taken the best parts of all the versions and then stitched it all together based on the inputs that we got. We created fictional characters inside the ship.

Taapsee Pannu is seen in the submarine in a trailer of the film. Does her character figure in any of the actual versions that are there on the taking down of Ghazi?

In one of the versions, there is a Bangladeshi refugee ship that is burning. It is a merchant ship that is somewhere on the same coast. The details of the survivors are not there. So, Taapsee plays a Bangladeshi refugee. When the Indo-Pak war took place, lots of Bangladeshis took refuge in India and continued living here.

Rana, you are also acting in a Tamil film that is yet to be titled. Tell us more about it.

“I have just started this film which tells the story of a soldier during the British rule. It is being directed by Sathya Siva, who directed the hit film Kazhugu in Tamil. The film has Regina, Nasser, Sathyaraj and a large number of British actors in it. We were shooting for this film in Kerala. We shot for a week in Kerala and for another week in Chennai. As of now, we have completed 10-20 per cent of this film.

Speaking of Kerala, what do you like most about it?

I have always been fond of Kerala. I have been going there for events. In the film, we wanted old British colonial buildings and Cochin has a lot of those. We are trying to create that old Madras in the film. We shot for just a week and the schedule was packed. I had very little time to travel. But I am fond of Kerala food. I haven't spent that much time there and I would love to spend much more. We have another big schedule coming up in Kerala and so yeah, I am looking forward to it.

I have been coming to Kerala for events and shoots. I have always been fond of Kerala

A glorious Diwali at Lulu in support of #Sandesh2Soldiers

We are happy to announce that Lulu Mall has created a record in the Asian & Indian Book of Records by lighting the maximum diyas in a single venue in support of Prime Minister Modi's #Sandesh2Soldiers campaign. Lulu Mall and group employees lit over 6000 Diwali diyas placed to deliver the message "Lulu salutes our soldiers." This feat also got Lulu Mall a title in the Asian and Indian Book of Records. A whopping 5900 ghee diyas were finally lit in one minute by close to 2000 people. More than 3000 diyas were exclusively used to deliver the message to the soldiers. The rest of the diyas were beautifully placed across the mall's campus. Apart from the Lulu group employees, Kochi Metro workers, Cochin Engineering college and SCMS college students participated in the enthralling accomplishment. With this feat, Lulu Mall sets another record by being the first mall in Asia to achieve a place in the Asian & Indian Book of Records. Kochi Mayor Soumini Jain, Kalamassery Municipality Chairperson Jessy Peter, Kalamassery Municipality Counsellor Bindu Manoharan, JCI Zone President C.S Ajmal, Lulu Group India Director - M.A. Nishad, Lulu Mall Business Head - Shibu Philips, Lulu Mall Commercial Manager- Sadikk Kassim, Lulu Retail General Manager - Sudhesh Nair, Lulu Group CFO - Sekar O, Lulu Media Coordinator - N.B Swaraj, Lulu Logistics Manager – Dilip Verma and Lulu Mall Deputy Manager – Shereef KK were present at the venue.

Fashion Stylist: Sneha Bagwe Kalra

"Lulu Celebrate is a one stop shop for women's ethnic fashion, ready-to-wear bridal attire and designer wear styles. You will find everything from casual Indian kurtas and leggings, to sarees, lehengas and bridal gowns," says Sneha Bagwe Kalra, a seasoned fashion designer from Mumbai who has worked with a range of accomplished designers and brands like Manish Malhotra and Jimmy Choo and is currently the senior fashion stylist with the Lulu group.

While, 'Masterpieces' is an exclusive wedding collection that offers unique ready-to-wear styles of designer bridal lehengas, gowns and wedding Kanchipuram sarees, 'Handcrafted', is a special service that helps clients to customise garments for any occasion. The design team at the store will help you fashion trendy garments that will suit your taste, personality and occasion. "Lulu Handcrafted Celebration offers customised services for bridal and party wear. You get to design your attire as per your choice of colour, texture, design and budget. It's not just for the bride, we have a lot of requests to design customised apparel for a variety of occasions. We had a German dancer who liked a Kanchipuram saree but it was too complicated for her to wear. So we converted the saree into a lehenga, which is much easier to wear and the customer was thrilled beyond words," explains Sneha.

Style Secrets

Hot trends for the season? “For summer weddings, fabrics like soft satin, micro velvet, crepe de chine, soft silk, lamé and net are the trendsetters. Pastel hues and earthy tones like nudes, peach, dusty pinks and mint green with a metallic tint, rule the colour palette. Global fashion has a significant influence on Indian bridal wear. Blouses make a statement with cold shoulder and off shoulder styles, ruffles, bell sleeves and fringes. These are styled with flouncy and dramatic lehengas. Asymmetrical patterns are also making a comeback on the runway,” says Sneha.

For the brides, she says, go very Indian traditional or wear an heirloom piece for the wedding day keeping it elegant, regal and respectful but for other occasions like Mehendi, Sangeet or the Reception, she urges you to experiment with contemporary styles.

Rubans by Chinu Kala

When a gorgeous former model starts her own line of jewellery and accessories, drawing inspiration from the French, it is bound to make waves! As we welcome accessories brand Rubans into Lulu Mall, Lulu Happiness talks to the brand's founder for a sneak peek at her life and work.

The collections at Rubans have always reflected Chinu Kala as the person herself; unique, classy, elegant and sophisticated. The former model, Mrs India Finalist, and founder of Fonte Corporate decided to leave a signature mark in the world of fashion by applying her honed sense of style and sophistication and presenting her eponymous jewellery label Rubans to the fashion-conscious woman in 2012. The brand offers a personally curated selection of fine jewellery and accessories that make a statement, yet can be worn every day.

Chinu Kala

Rubans have been featured in countless print and online publications. The brand has 3 stores in Bengaluru and 2 in Hyderabad. You can also find her collection in popular online shopping sites as well. Rubans have recently opened their outlet at Lulu Mall. As you ascend the escalator near the main atrium to the first floor the first thing that would probably catch your eye is the unexpected sparkles at the displays of this store.

Read on for an glance into the life of Chinu Kala and the inner workings at her brand Rubans.

Rubans – What does that word mean? What is the brand all about? And what does it mean to you?

Rubans is a French word that means ribbons. Ribbons symbolise elegance, grace and colours and that is exactly what our brand stands for, celebrating the elegance, grace and colours.

Rubans is a high fashion accessory brand that offers international fashion and ethnic Indian designs as well. While our in-house designers craft the ethnic Indian designs, we also associate with several international designers for the western designs. We feature an extensive collection of designs both from the East and West.

The brand means everything to me, it was my first love, my passion, and I had always enjoyed the journey with it since its inception.

My innate qualities like perseverance and a strong belief in myself have all helped me overcome my challenges and emerge successful

How did you come up with the concept of Rubans?

During my days of modelling, runways and shows, I had noticed that even the best designer outfit would fail to communicate and impress without the right jewellery. Jewellery is the secret instrument to style and it has the power to transform the appearance of the garment. I loved to work on that element. In addition, I was inspired by stylish women.

I had always wanted to start a business, and I realised that this was my niche. Since there are hardly any jewellery brands by Indian designers that stand out, I knew I would have an upper hand. I had the experience of running Fonte Corp, a company specialized in customised and personalised gifts in the corporate circles. So, putting all this together I came up with the concept of Rubans.

What makes your collections unique?

Each and every single piece at Rubans is curated by me. I take great attention in looking into every aspect of the design – the colour, the finish of each piece before it comes to the store. Every piece is unique and if I could describe the collection in two words, I would say ‘royalty’ and ‘novelty’. The pieces exude a royal vibe and stand out in the crowd. And novelty means that we ensure we have new collections in our store every fortnight. No other brands do this. We also have kids’ jewellery, something you would not find with most of the jewellery brands.

While transitioning from modelling to entrepreneurship, how did you reinvent yourself? What are the qualities you possess that helped you in your business?

I did not have to reinvent myself as the nature of my business was an extension of something I was previously doing, modelling. My innate qualities like perseverance and a strong belief in myself have all helped me overcome my challenges and emerge successful.

Each and every single piece at Rubans is curated by me

During your childhood, what did you want to be when you grew up?

I always wanted to run a business, and be known for it. I was not sure about the type of business, but I wanted to own something. I never wanted to do a regular job.

What are the different kinds of products we can find at Rubans?

We have an extensive line of unique jewellery, both ethnic and western. We also feature kids’ jewellery, handbags, scarves and other accessories.

What is the difficult part about managing Rubans? How do you overcome that?

When you open a store, you have people with different tastes visiting your store. Catering to the taste of each person was initially difficult. We overcame that by encouraging our staff to interact with the customers, to understand them, learn their tastes and through this feedback we learned to create a line that appeals everyone.

What are the recent accolades your brand has received?

We launched 6 stores within a short period and for this, we were recently honoured with the Debutante Retailer Award at the Star Retailer Awards.

We have seen a model, a Mrs India finalist, an entrepreneur and a mother. What are your future projects?

I have always been a health freak. We will be introducing a new line of health products for the fitness conscious soon

Relish Meets Royalty at Maharaja Bhog

The Queen of Arabian Sea gives you countless choices for a gourmet experience fit for a king. Yet some experiences are so unique, they linger in our minds for a long, long time. The Maharaja Bhog restaurant at Lulu Mall is just such a place.

Located on the third floor at Lulu Mall, the Maharaja Bhog is a premium vegetarian Thali restaurant that serves authentic Rajasthani and Gujarati dishes and traditional Indian meals. The restaurant is spread over a floor area of 2200 square feet and is run by Maheshwari Foods and Hospitality Pvt Ltd. The brand has a national and international presence with outlets across Mumbai, Dubai and even in Texas, US. The 30 different quintessential thalis that they serve on each day of the month are actually an exploration of Rajasthani and Gujarati cuisine culture. A thali meal is something that lets you taste each and every type of dish of a typical cuisine without overfilling yourselves, the best way to explore the cuisine indeed. Team Lulu Happiness invites three young entrepreneurs from Kochi for this gastronomic experience; and here at Maharaja Bhog, we are set to discover a melange of subtle, sweet and spicy flavours, warm hues and textures, all balanced by a rich aroma.

The champagne-hued environs at Maharaja Bhog make for a warm and inviting setting for our guests Nuthan Manohar, yoga and wellness expert, brand consultant and CEO of MeMetMe, Yoga Studio, and Alternative and Holistic Health Service; Lal Bharathan, CEO of Lap47 Performance Studio that offers a complete line of performance, aerodynamics and styling enhancements and accessories for vehicles; and Sanil G Nair, Managing Director of 3M Car Care, Professional Car Detailing Centre.

A very rich and bountiful sight. You become satisfied simply by looking at the spread

– Sanil G Nair

An instrumental version of ‘Ae Maalik There Bandhe Hum’ plays soulfully in the background. The space exudes a Rajasthani-Marwadi-Kutch ambience with geometric structural accents, wood and glass displays that feature dried spices and Rajasthani motifs and classic furniture. The ivory and golden textured wallpapers add a royal vibe, for a dining experience fit for a king. Large brass plates with small katoris (bowls) and tumblers are already set on the table while an LED screen at the side of the table displays the menu to be served that day.

The staff chant a prayer before they get on to work. Nuthan, being a yoga trainer herself, and accustomed to mantras and hymns is particularly impressed by this. A member of the wait staff comes in with an ornately designed finger bowl reminding you that at Maharaja Bhog, the adage ‘Atithi Devo Bhava’ is not a mere tagline but an absolute commitment to service. Our guests are welcomed with the saffron and sandalwood sorbet - a deep golden-coloured refreshing drink.

Usually, the different courses are served separately, but here at Maharaja Bhog, the entire meal including the dessert is served in one go. “A very rich and bountiful sight. You become satisfied simply by looking at the spread,” Sanil comments.

Lal adds, “All these dishes in brass plates, this ambience... everything adds up to make one feel like a member of a royal family. Maharaja Bhog has surely done justice to its name.”

Lulu EATING OUT

All these dishes in brass plates, this ambience... everything adds up to make one feel like a member of a royal family. Maharaja Bhog has surely done justice to its name
– Lal Bharathan

The starters - Papaya Mirchi Salad, Rajasthani Mirchiwada, Dabej Dhokla, and Kashmiri Dahi-wada, accompanied with Imlj (Tamarind) Sweet Chutney, Pudina (Mint) and a lemon wedge come in first. The Mirchiwada and Dabej Dhokla, which is made of fermented rice and masala from Dabej region are mild but the tangy side dishes balance the flavour. The Papaya Mirchi Salad is crispy, spicy and tangy while the Kashmiri Dahi-wada made from black gram is soft, sweet and tangy. Nuthan mentions that this is a fresh and pleasant break from the usual palate.

Our guests then move on to the main course comprising Indian breads like Fulka Roti, Beet Puri, and Peru Thepla with a plethora of side dishes like Aloo Dilkush, Chana Moong, Malai Kofta, Green Gujrat, Rajasthani Kadhi, Rajasthani Dal, Gujarati Dal and Gujarati Kadhi. The Fulka Roti comes drizzled with ghee, while the Beet Puri, as the name suggests, is flavoured with beetroot. The guests then try the rice dishes – Paneer Bhurji Pulao, Steamed Rice and Khichdi, along with Papads, Garlic Chutney, and Carrot Pickle.

Lal admits that though he usually prefers spicy food, the mildly flavoured dishes had left him pleasantly surprised. “The Rajasthan Dal and Khichdi taste great together,” he appreciates.

Finally, it is the time for dessert – Rabdi Malpua, a thin pancake dipped in sugar syrup and Fruit Float, a sweet dish made of fruits simmered in milk. The chef Gulab Singh makes a visit to our table and the guests heartily compliment him for this soul-satisfying treat.

Where Everything is Finger lickin' good

Who among us can resist the piping hot breaded and fried, crispy, finger licking goodness that is KFC? Lulu Happiness goes on a delicious adventure and comes back craving for more.

It is common knowledge that KFC is an American fast food restaurant chain founded by Colonel Harland Sanders and specialises in fried chicken. This restaurant chain has its outlets at over 20,000 locations in 123 countries. KFC's outlet in the Food Court, 3rd floor at Lulu Mall is an important landmark as it represents a milestone in the company's expansion strategy in Kerala. By being present at Lulu mall, the outlet is able to cater to the chicken and burger cravings of all the local, national and international visitors of the mall.

KFC recently invited the Lulu Happiness team for their Kitchen Tour. Now the Kitchen Tour is an initiative of KFC to encourage the customers to visit their kitchen. One gets to see what happens behind the scenes and how the best and the freshest ingredients transform themselves into sizzling crispy goodness. We were pleasantly surprised to hear that any customer can request the General Manager for a kitchen tour at any time and watch how the dishes are made.

As we entered their extremely hygienic kitchen, we could see some staff wearing red aprons while others wearing green ones. On being asked about this, the General Manager Sudheesh Xavier replied, "KFC separates vegetarian food items from the non-vegetarian products. Not only the products but also the equipment used for cooking, utensils, the workstations and the storage units are separated. The chefs and staff wearing the green aprons handle the vegetarian dishes while the red, the non-vegetarian. There is absolutely no chance of the non-vegetarian dishes mixing with the vegetarian ones in the kitchen.” That’s great news for vegetarians indeed!

We saw the chicken pieces being marinated, breaded and fried in the deep fryer. “We follow a set protocol while cooking the dishes. For instance breading the marinated chicken for popcorns involves a 10-10-10 that is 10 times scoop fold and 10 times scoop Lift. The oil is set to the right temperature and each item has a set time to be cooked and one cannot change the time manually. The Smoky Grilled Chicken, for example, is cooked in an oven for a set time and one can open the oven only after that time when a buzzer goes off,” Sudheesh explained.

This set of protocols for marinating, breading, frying and assembling gives every dish at KFC the world-famous signature taste regardless of who is cooking. Up next, we saw the food arranged in trays with MRD (Made, Ready, Discard) tags which can be monitored from the corporate office. This ensures that cooked items not used after the resting time will be discarded. We then saw the chef check the temperature, texture, and colour of the sample item of each batch to ensure it is cooked well.

We heard an alarm ring and we watched the staff move quickly towards the wash basin. “KFC follows strict rules for hygiene. The staff are required to scrub, wash and sanitise their hands every 30 minutes.” Sudheesh said.

KFC India redefined the existing meal space in the country by giving consumers the only COMPLETE meal option. KFC’s 5-in-1 Meal box is the perfect choice for a complete, abundant meal with a variety of tastes and textures, made extremely affordable at just INR 189/- With two variants available: Rice Meal Box and Zinger Meal Box, consumers can make a smart choice and indulge in a signature KFC meal for a finger lickin’ good experience. The 5-in-1 Rice Meal Box consists of Rice & gravy bowl, Hot & Crispy chicken (1pc), Hot wings (2 pc), Chocopie and Regular Pepsi. Whereas the 5-in-1 Zinger Meal Box variant consists of Chicken Zinger, Potato hashbrown (1pc), Hot wings (2 pc), Chocopie and Regular Pepsi.

With a minimum value of INR 250/- and a validity of up to six months, gift cards make for perfect gifting options for all special occasions. Whether it is the upcoming Valentine’s Day, or sharing the bond of love with your sibling on Rakshabandhan, consumers can buy the KFC gift card at their nearest KFC restaurant or online at <https://online.kfc.co.in/egift-card>
